

The South Carolina Gazette

The South-Carolina Gazette was a weekly newspaper, established 8 January 1732 by Thomas Whitmarsh. This run of the newspaper was not long; it was given up on 8 September 1733. Louis Timothée, a French-Huguenot who Anglicized his name to Lewis Timothy, started it up again in 2 February 1734. After January of 1739, his widow, Elizabeth, and their son Pierre or Peter, carried it on through April 1772. In May it continued under the name of Powell, Hughes & Co.